Rizal St., Barangay 3, Silay City, Negros
Occidental, Philippines

It is my honor to greet our honored guests, school officials, parents, and students, a pleasant and productive day.

Several years had passed since we have started this collaboration. As I render my short message in today's event, I could not help but be overwhelmed with happiness and gratefulness because, despite these past years of adversaries, we still find ways to stay in contact with each other. We would always be grateful to all the officers and personnel behind this bond between us, which only gets stronger through the years. Now that the air is clear again and the skies are once more opened, we are very much in synch in extending our invitation for you to visit us here in the Philippines.

Let me reiterate our wish to be your partner in education. Now that physical togetherness is again possible, we assure you that you can count on us in your quest for knowledge, as we count on you or our quest for such. Be it in research and development, cultural linkage or English language, we are always ready and willing to give you our service.

As I have mentioned the last time, we grow bigger in number every year, and we become more and more aggressive in reaching our goals for internalization. For such a goal, we believe that our partnership is a strong foundation. You are one of the inspirations that we have in reaching our goal!

As I end, let me thank you once again for always considering us and making us a part of your activities like this one. So without much ado, let me close this message with the biggest and warmest congratulations for this year's spring opening.

Aregatou gozaimasu.
